ABOUT THE COURSE

- The course covers the history, ethics and philosophy of historic environment conservation together with a critical understanding of contemporary issues in architectural conservation practice. It is supplemented by field exercises involving systematic research, recording, analysis and interpretation of historic buildings.
- Conservation-Studios focus on specific aspects of professional practice, repair and conservation techniques, legislation and planning, policy and management of conservation projects.
- A Thesis at the end of the second year culminates all of the knowledge, perspectives and practical skills learnt.
- The programme will provide one with the knowledge base, practical skills and confidence to address Heritage issues and to advance ones career in historic building conservation and related fields.

STUDENTS WHO COMPLETE THIS COURSE WILL BE ABLE TO:

- Assess and evaluate historic buildings, their materials, performance and significance in historic, contemporary, urban and rural contexts, with awareness of sustainable, long-term outcomes.
- Demonstrate an applied, systematic, in-depth understanding of essential disciplinary knowledge in the conservation of cultural heritage and awareness of its breadth and its relevant academic, professional and socio-economic contexts.
- Make well-informed decisions in a complex and evolving situation by applying advanced, professional-level conservation principles and methods in assessing diverse problems.
